"Hey, Rob!"

SUE: "Have you seen the new yearbook yet?"

ROB: "No, I didn't order one."

SUE: "There's still some at the bookstore."

ROB: "Why would I want a yearbook? What's in it for me?"

SUE: "Plenty—don't you want to be a part of it all?"

ROB: "Sure, but what does a book of pictures have to do with it?"

SUE: "Everything, from the football season record to the Prom is in there. It helps you be up on it all."

ROB: "Why should I care?"

SUE: "Wouldn't you like to look back and remember things as they were?"

ROB: "I can remember anything that's important. Like last Saturday..."

SUE: "High school is more than what happens on the weekends. Like it's sports, dances, and other stuff. Isn't that enough to get excited about?"

ROB: "That's all real nice, but I need proof."

SUE: "Well, go buy that yearbook and find out WHAT'S IN IT FOR YOU!"

Possibilities Are Endless

A student at Lowell High School cannot complain of boredom. His choices for entertainment are limitless. There are many activities included in each year's calendar of events to attract his interest.

For the theatrical student, the fall and spring plays, and the newly-created Homecoming Variety Show are interesting prospects.

The Homecoming activities and Junior Miss Pageant are exciting choices for the student who wants to get involved with competition.

For those who simply enjoy a relaxing evening with someone special, there are the Christmas and Sadie Hawkins Dances and, of course, the special dance, the Junior-Senior Prom.

The possibilities are endless!

With Mr. Vacaro, band director, the Pep Band, and the cheerleaders giving their support at a pep session, the possibilities for an athletic victory are endless.

Morrow wins Jr. Miss

Senior girls enter the Junior Miss competition for different reasons.

Karen Andrade said, "I wanted to get to know the girls of my graduating class better, and Junior Miss seemed a fun way to do it."

What all the girls discover, however, is that the pageant is not all glamour and excitement. Many long hours are spent polishing the program.

On September 25, the winner of the 22nd annual Junior Miss Program, Jenna Marie Morrow, was announced. Jenna also won the judges' interview, giving her 35 percent of the total points, Susan Sykes was first runner up, Kathy Robinson, the second runner-up, also received the Youth and Fitness Award. The Creative Talent Award went to Sarah Scheckel. Carolyn Blank received the Performing Talent Award, and Gina Eich was honored for Scholastic Achievement, Finally, Kim Felder won the Poise and Appearance Award, and Kelly Mathias was the Spiric of Junior Miss.

The Homecoming festivities began with Spirit Week which aided in boosting the morale of the team and the student "Spirit Week needed more participation from everyone, but the senior class won the Spirit Stick as usual," said Chris Zugel, sophomore.

Spirit Week provided a sense of unity and school spirit with everyone working together to build pride in our school.

Theatre gets the spirit

To spark enthusiasm for Homecoming, the Theatre Arts Department and Thespians added "The History of Homecoming-Part I" to this year's activities. The show was an original comedy written by theatre students and created specifically to boost school spirit.

DJ's music sets mood

The Christmas Dance, "Snowflakes by Starlight," was sponsored by the sophomore class and held on December 22.

Instead of hiring the traditional band to play, the class used a disc jockey to provide music.

"I liked the idea of having a DJ rather than a band. It was a lot more fun to dance. I had a really good time," said ju-

mor Shelly Paquett

In addition to music and good consepany, guests were treated to a surprise visit from Santa Claus who stopped by to spread holiday cheer throughout the Devilla Company.

While there were few snowflakes outside that night, there was plenty of starlight inside to set a holiday mood.

One of the experiences Mame exposes Patrick to is the world of art created by artist Matt Francis and his model. Karen Andrade.

Karen Andrade and John Ruley have parts as chorus members. The production required a larger chorus than usual.

Mame's acting debut as Vera's (Carolyn Blank) costar is less than spectacular.

Mame consults her best friend, Vera Charles, for advice on raising Patrick.

MAME stops the show!

The spring musical, MAME, was a smash! Many of the shows were sold out and the house was packed with an appreciative audience each performance.

The storyline dealt with a social butterfly, Mame, who gains custody of her young, impressionable nephew. Patrick. She raises him to be a mature, sensitive and intelligent young man.

The play not only dealt with Patrick's growth, but also with Mame's. Valuable lessons on life were learned by the fictional characters and the audience, too.

Carey Cunningham, voted most promising actress, portraved Mame.

Putting this musical together was a lot of hard work. We pulled it together in the end and had a great time doing it!" said Carey.

In addition to the story and the fine acting, the audience was also entertained by the costuming done by Mr. Tom Sufana and the music provided by Lowell's own orchestra under the direction of Mr. Joe Vacaro.

Said one audience member, "MAME was the best production I've ever attended at the school. The kids did a great job. What impressed me was the way the stage crew helped the cast with dress changes and props. They deserve recognition, too."

Prom-goers enjoy changes

This year like every other, the juniors and seniors anxiously awaited the arrival of Prom. They looked forward to this gala from their first year of high school. And the day, May 18, finally arrived

In keeping with the tradition established last year, the Prom was held outside of school at the After Four Supper Club in Cedar Lake. Here is where similarities to other Proms ended however.

One change was the reserved seating policy established by the hosts, the juniors. Couples had to choose the table they wished to be seated at when they signed up to attend. One reason for this was the designing of the favors which were water goblets containing lit candles which were engraved with the couple's names and placed at their table setting.

The theme, "Stairway to Heaven", was not advertised as in years before. It was kept secret until the doors opened at 8:00 P.M. that evening. The club was decorated with streamers of silver and set off with a winding silver staircase.

The juniors chose the band Jubal for preserve memories of a grand evening.

Annie Ross and Brad Stepp pose for their formal Prom picture wearing outfits chosen by most couples this year. The romantic look for guls and the sophisticated look for the guys were popular, While Lori Mates chose a lacy, romantic gown for the Prom, John Crane chose to individualize his tuxedo.

National statistics show that more high, school students than ever before are attending their Proms and spending large sums of money on the 'traditionals' like clothes, flowers and dinner, not to mention the "frills" like a limousine or the day after expenses. Prom is the one time during the year that couples can really dress up and they have started a whole new feshion trend in the process.

Guys chose the traditional tuxedo in white, grey or take but the made then, look more special with the return to ruffled shirts. Many of them chose to dress their tuxes up even more by wearing, toe and cumberbands in colors to match their dates dresses. Becoming popular too are top hats and cames for a more sophisticated look.

Popular with the girls for Prom this year was the return to the frilly, off-theshoulder, romantic, pastel dresses of years parasols in the color of their dresses to complete the outfit. For girls, however, almost any evening wear was in style, even short dresses or gowns in various styles and colors.

While the Madonna or punk look may never catch on for Prom wear, every couple can set their own style for a very special night of the year.

To honor the class, a Baccalaureate-Commencement ceremony was held on June 9. This date was later than usual because seniors were required to finish school with the underclassmen. The Baccalaureate program began with an invocation given by the Reverend Sidney Tucker of the First Church of the Nazarene, and concluded with Monsignor Timothy Doody's speech, "Dig In-Get a Toe-Hold on Life."

Seniors chosen to speak at Commencement were Jennifer Bielefeld, Susan Sykes, and Lori Mates. Dr. Luekens presided over the ceremony and presented the Class of 1985 to the parents, friends and faculty members who filled the gym.

Diplomas were awarded by Mr. John Kuruzovich, Superintendent, and Mrs. Mary A. Hayden, secretary of the School Board.

Finals go out 'Smokin'

Freshman Julie Feddeler first brought the idea of a dance emceed by Joe Dawson before the Student Council. The dance would be a celebration of the end of the first semester. Due to scheduling conflicts, however, the dance didn't come off until January 19. It turned out to be a celebration at the end of finals.

"Smokin" Joe Dawson, from WBBM in Chicago, accepted the invitation to be the guest of honor and DJ for the evening. He also gave away T-shirts and albums to help students remember the night.

Although January 19 turned out to be the coldest night of the year, the Multi-Purpose Room was filled with dancers. Admission was open to all and the event attracted one of the biggest turnouts ever.

The English Department provides a wide variety of activities ranging from reading to doing speeches to acting. English is the center of all learning because without English, a student could not read or communicate.

A student interested in one day attending college enrolls in College English while the theatrical student enrolls in drama and speech. Even the English student of average ability has a chance to succeed. The student is placed in a basic, intermediate or advanced phase so that his ability is utilized to its fullest potential.

Each class level covers the same material, the major difference being the different speeds at which the material is covered.

Mathematics

With the increasing demand for mathematical skills, the math department is constantly working to prepare students. Courses range from general math to advanced math topics, depending on a student's ability.

Incoming freshmen, for instance, can choose from three math courses—general math, pre-algebra and Algebra I.

For the aspiring mathematicians, there are computer courses and advanced math courses available.

Regardless of the course students choose, the math department supplements a strong academic core for the college-bound and the work-oriented student.

Social Studies

Social Studies is much more than a history course.

Our department offers not only the required classes of U.S. history and government but there are also electives like world history, sociology, psychology and geography to choose from.

The social studies classes make the academic circle complete and add to a student's full education by helping him cope with the future by learning about his past.

Science

Our science department offers a variety of classes ranging from earth science to human physiology.

There are two major branches of science which a student pursues to complete his requirements—applied and physical science.

For the future engineers, the department offers both chemistry and physics and for the future biologist, biology and botany are helpful.

A strong science curriculum like ours is necessary for college admittance to help our students cope with an everchanging technological world.

Shorthand, advanced typing, and advanced shorthand are valuable secretarial skills that are offered by the department.

Classes such as accounting, office machines, data processing, business law, sales, and computer applications in business give a student more specialized business training.

The band not only delights the ears with music, but it also entertains as well. By playing at football games, parades and Commencement, the band student learns the art of music through practices and actual performances. Although many hours are spent polishing and tuning the abilities of these active musicians, the hard work pays off when the crowds applaud their performances.

The choir complements the music curriculum with the study of music ranging from the classical to the popular. Every singer has the chance to develop his voice. The many concerts and public performances allow the student to feel a sense of pride and accomplishment.

Under the direction of Mrs. Lorig, the choir performs at their winter concert.

Art/Home Ec

Many art classes are offered for the future artist. He can begin with basic art, a class designed to introduce different art forms and techniques. Next he can proceed to other specialized classes for skill like ceramics, design, painting and sculpture. Through intensive study, a student can learn how to create a masterpiece of his own to be proud of.

Another elective area, Home Economics, provides a skill and knowledge of great use to a student after he leaves high school. Adyone, whether he wants to become a chef or not, needs to know how to cook. Cooking, however, is not the only area Home Economics has to offer. Classes such as Living on Your Own, Textiles and Clothing, Family Relations and Child Development help prepare a student to face an often uncertain future. With Home Ec offerings, the student can at least make intelligent choices about his own life.

Guidance/Library Audio Visual

The Guidance Department is always ready to help. Whether it's indecision about scheduling, questions about colleges and scholarships or personal problems, the guidance counselors are ready to offer their services to students and faculty. The counselors not only programmed students into their classes but they also took charge of the SAT Preparation course and the registration for summer school.

The library can be a student's salvation when doing school work if he makes use of the many resources the department has to offer. The books, newspapers, and reference materials can unlock the key to a puzzling research question.

The Audio Visual Department provides several services for the school. Magazines, videotapes, televisions, and VCR's are available for educational or recreational purposes.

Administration

The job of the administrators is divided into four areas. Dr. Luekens oversees everyone and everything that affects the school in his job as principal.

To share the responsibility is Mr. Johnson, who as assistant principal, supervises clubs and maintains a schedule of their activities. He also is in charge of the building and the custodial seaff.

Mr. Wornhoff works most closely with students in his role as Dean of Students. All matters of attendance and discipline are handled by him.

Lastly, Mr. Bales, the Athletic Director, schedules sporting events and manages all athletics. Considering the number of athletic teams, their practice sessions and the games or meets they play in a season, it's obvious Mr. Bales has a job that takes him well beyond the school day.

These four men keep school running smoothly so the educational process can benefit us all.

Dr. Luekens takes care of last minute business at a meeting for mid-term graduates.

Mr Wornhoff takes time during the day to answer questions from students in the North Commons.

Little things mean most, noticed least

Students often take for granted the little things people do for them. For example, the cooks, custodians, bus drivers, secretaries and aides spend their time and much effort trying to make things run smoothly by doing the little extras we often don't notice until they're not done.

The cooks consistently prepare warm lunches, not to mention the doughnuts and salad bar they provide daily.

The custodians make sure the school is clean, the garbage cans are emptied, the paper towel dispensers are full and the repairs to broken lockers, burnt out lights and damaged desks are done.

The bus drivers make sure we get to

The secretaries handle all office business, answer our questions and deal with friendly and ethicient basis. Without the aides many teachers could not function on a day-to-day basis and study halls could not exist.

Without these dedicated people to help us take care of business, the school would be a lonely and chaotic place

This year was Lowell's turn to be evaluated by a North Central team. In November, the group visited the school, talking with staff and students and meeting with a steering committee composed of Mrs. Cusic, Mrs. Hardesty, Mr. Kalbac, Mr. Mills and Mr. Wornhoff.

The committee praised us for having a good educational program taught by dedicated teachers. They also found the student body to be friendly and well-behaved.

Our weaknesses were nothing new to those familiar with the school. The team noted the lack of walls, the noise level and the pool as some areas needing attention. The team also cited student apathy and a lack of community involvement as prob-

Sports are a means of recreation and relaxation. Dedication and determination are factors which make a successful athlete. In these ways, sports are open to all students as an opportunity for getting involved.

There are a variety of sports each season which students can choose from. For the athlete who enjoys playing as part of a team, there is basketball, baseball, football and volleyball. If he prefers individual competition for personal satisfaction from wins, there is cross country, golf, gymnastics, wrestling, swimming, track and tennis.

Regardless of the sport he chooses, the athlete benefits. He learns discipline, obedience, and sportsmanship, all lessons which carry over into any life situations.

With each victory or game well-played, there is a sense of pride in that success. The trophies, the recognition or the personal satisfaction gained make all the hard work and sweat worthwhile.

Injuries, defense stall wins

The Varsity Football Team began the season with two victories which not only broke their losing streak, but also heightened the team's spirits. It showed them that with determination and practice, they could defeat good teams.

While the team's offensive line was impressive, the defensive backs needed more work.

The "never give up" attitude helped them to work as a team and develop discipline.

Captain Kevin McCarthy thought the team's weakest area was its inability to stay healthy.

"With the numerous injuries, many key starters missed important games," said Kevin.

Terry Harmston, co-captain, held an opposing view, citing defense as the team's problem.

Losses due to varied reasons

The Freshman Football Team went 1-8 this season. Their poor record was due to their inexperience.

The team began its season with a loss to Calumet. Practice seemed to be their key to overcoming an opening season defeat for they came back to defeat Andrean, 6-0. However, after this victory, all of their weaknesses seem to get the better of them for they suffered consecutive losses after that.

The Junior Varsity Football Team also suffered a disappointing season with a record of 1-3. Their problem, however, was not as much with the team and their performances as with the weather. Their season had to be cut short after four games. Their last four match-ups had to be cancelled.

Little practice, ability burt

Coach Jeff Dhonau, Boys' Tennis Team coach, felt the reason for the team's poor showing this season was due to the lack of ability of the players.

season was due to the lack of ability of the players.

"Our skill level was lower than most of our opponents. Also, the boys who played tennis didn't practice much in the summer," said Dhonau.

Junior Doug Langen held similar views. "Our team didn't have the talent or facilities to match most of the schools we played."

The season wasn't all disappointment. There was one highlight for the team; their win against River

Forest stirred excitement since it was a three-setter lasting until 8:00 P.M.

The Girls' Tennis Team had a record much like the Boys', yet their losses don't reflect how close several of the matches were. While the boys were shut out in their losses, the girls lost several matches by only one set.

Outstanding players were Jennifer Kelby at singles, and Wendy Hutton and Shelley Paquette at doubles. All three girls advanced to the second round of Lake Suburban Conference play.

Fans kept on edge of seats

The Boys' Varsity Basketball Team had a split season in terms of wins and losses. Despite that, they drew large crowds and fan support throughout the season and especially at Sectionals. With wins against Rennselaer and Hebron, the Red Devils went into the final game of the Sectionals against KV mentally and physically ready. Behind them was more support from the stands than they had seen in many years. The fans were rewarded with an exciting game which had to go into overtime before KV could pull out a win, 64-59.

The team struggled with its share of injuries. Several of the team's starters, Cash, Kirchenstien, and Spencer, suffered injuries throughout the season which cost the team several games.

"This was one of the most exciting seasons ever. There were so many games that went overtime. You really got your money's worth at a basketball game."

The number one doubles team of Shelly Paquette and Wends Hutton played we all season and advanced to Regionals.

Fod Wilkerson competed in the high Jump and took his talents as far as State competition.

The Boys-Varsity Basketball Team was no match for the girls in terms of season record or fan support and publicity.

Many of the girls on the swimming team found success in the fact that they worked hard on personal goals and improved as the season progressed.

The Girls Track Team could have probably given the boys a run for their mone with the placing of two runners in the Regional roster.

May the best PERSON win!

They condition, they practice, they fiercely compete. They regirls and their sports program is not just a sideline to the boys' but a real contender for athletic achievement.

While fans overflowed KV's gym during the boys' basketball Sectionals, the Varsity Girls' Basketball Team was holding its own with a 5-9 season record.

Likewise in swimming, both teams finished with similar records and more losses than wins as a team. Yet, in both cases, the scores don't show an individual's effort to better his/her time and achieve personal goals.

Even into spring sports, the Gifts Track Team kept pace with the boys. The Boys' Track Team placed first in the Lowell Relays and sent senior Tod Wilkerson on to State in the high hump. The girls sent freshman Miki Morrow and sophomore Trish Feddeler on to Regionals.

Tennis was a different story. The girls season record shows them with more losses than wins, but the record doesn't show that they lost close matches by one set in many cases. They advanced three players on to Regionals. On the other hand, the boys were often shutout and went no further than Sectionals.

Girls' sports are young but growing. Girls are even competing on some of the boys teams like golf and cross country. They're hete to stay on the athletic fields of competition. What's next! Maybe a lady wrestler!

Team spirit eases changes

"This year was our biggest turnout. We ended the season with 30 players and were able to field a freshman team," said Steve Schwanke, varsity coach.

The Varsity Team was a young one, composed of all juniors. There was also a new coach. As a result, the girls were subject to changes in philosophy and game strategies. But the girls had strong wills to win and positive attitudes. This combination took them to a win in the first game of Sectionals.

Missy Richards said, "The support we did not receive during the season really hurt us. Yet, we did not quit. We never gave up and the result was our first Sectional win."

With a year of working together and working out all the problems a first year can bring, the team and its coach count on more successes.

"We have our entire team returning next year. We have a lot of potential to have a winning season, said Denise Wleklinski.

"Our Rensselaer game was probably our best game. We were able to keep our composure and play with confidence. This was a close game we won in the last second."

"Some of the girls had never played basketball before and that made it difficult to compete at the JV level," said Coach Kathy Nelson of the Junior Varsity Girls' Basketball Team.

Nevertheless, the girls made the best out of the season by improving with every game. The desire of the girls to improve helped them and Coach Nelson put the best prepared team possible on the floor each game.

The team's strong area was its forward play and the fact that the team had height only added to this advantage. The guard plays, however, needed improvement against opposing presses. Hard work compensates losses

If we could have had more kids come out in specific weight classes, it would have helped a lot with attitude, morale and performance," said Coach lerry Cameron.

To overcome this weakness, the boys had to work harder in the classes which were filled. They conditioned before the season began by running, lifting weights, swimming and competing against one another. Since varsity sports were chosen on the basis of these challenge matches, the boys had to work hard one-on-one.

Yet, it's this individual work which drives most boys to the sport.

Senior Joe Stoller said, "I like the individual competition and the feeling of winning on your own."

While individual growth and achievement can come to a wrestler, the team agreed that Coach Cameron was a strong influence on their team with his constant encouragement.

"I can, I will, I want!"

Right attitude is what counts

"We tried to have the girls approach everything with an artitude of 'thinking straight', avoiding negatives and going for it," said Assistant Coach Beth Wisch of her team's philosophy.

During pre-season training, the girls practiced stretches, built stamina and concentrated on balance and strength. Practice built them up physically to match their mental attitude.

This combination took them to the Lake Suburban Conference and a second in optionals and a third overall.

During the season, they excelled in floor exercise and vaulting. Injuries on and off throughout the season and a weakness on the uneven parallel bars were the only obstacles the girls faced, yet they overcame them to go on to a successful season. Early slump dooms season

Coach Pete Iussig felt the season was not the best it could have been because the team "did not play to potential". He felt the boys who played summer baseball had the chance of doing well when the Varsity Baseball season began.

The team got into a losing slump at the beginning of the season, and morale remained low. Pitching was the team's strongest area but hitting was weak and this cost them quite a few games.

Crown Point, a tough competitor, didn't help and seemed to be the team's biggest obstacle to over-

Quality of wins means more

"I would have liked to have seen a marked improvement over the course of the season, from the first game to the last. We showed improvement at times but not as much as I had hoped for," said JV Baseball coach, Kent Hess.

Only winning two games reflected the team's weak areas of fielding and hitting. However, the win against Calumet was a real morale booster for the team. Here they began to show some competitive spirit and play together as a team.

Hess said, "It was a well-played game both offen sively and defensively. (The team showed) good hustle."

The freshmen used their season to build skills and teamwork. Their winning the last game of the season against Griffith, who had beaten them earlier, may signal bigger things for them in the years to come.

Wilkerson earns spot at State

The biggest achievement for the Boys' Track Team came not in their season record but in the number of records which were broken by individual runners.

Terrye Kirchenstien broke the school record in the shot put. Matt Bielefeld broke the school record in the 1600 and 800 meter runs. Anthony Novak broke records in the 200 and 300 yard dashes while Bob Wisch took a first in pole vault.

Outstanding team achievements were in the Lowell Relays where the team took first place and the meet against Rensselaer where the team won with a score of 69-58.

The season ended with a victory of another kind with senior Tod Wilkerson being a state qualifier in the high jump event.

More and more young female athletes are excelling and becoming more competitive. The Girls' Track Team had to push hard to beat the stiff

"If everyone did not contribute 110% at every meet and practice, we couldn't do it," said sophomore Mary Ann Slinn.

By setting goals for personal bests at the beginning of the season, they had something to work for. At the same time they are working on individual records, the runners must also remember they are part of a reary.

Said Slinn, "The biggest help in achieving my goals this year was the help from the other teammates. They showed me what I'm supposed to do to reach my goals."

There was a special highlight for the team according to Denise Wleklinski. "We had the privilege of having an extremely alented freshman, Miki Morrow. She has so much potential for becoming better in her events. A freshman making it to Regionals and being 'Conference Champ' is not bad at attr."

Sharing Morrow's spotlight was Trish Feddeler, sophomore, who also advanced to Regionals.

"The best game was when we beat Crown Point because they're such a great team."

Win over CP boosts morale

The Golf Team felt more practice would have helped them to have a more successful season. Still, many golfers, like Steve Cook, took advantage of the nine hole course in his backyard in Lake Dale to sharpen their skills.

Besides the luck to have a practice course, many of the players credited Coach Bruce Farley as being an inspiration and example to them. "He's a good golfer," said Steve Cook. "I learned a lot from him."

The golfers were unanimous in their choice of a highlight of the season.

The chance to compete

We have a winning reputation when we compete in contests against other schools because of the success of our clubs and their members and sponsors

In many clubs, students work together to achieve victory for the whole group. Cheerleaders, Thespin ans and the choir are groups in which everyone contributes to the overall success and recognition of the club. Individuals wins are earned in clubs like

OEA, VICA, and Industrial Education.

Members of these clubs then not only devote their time and energies to fund raisers and dances but they also find time to either study or practice their skills to compete in district, state and sometimes even national competitions. Their reputation and that of the club they represent are put on the line. It's a rare occasion when a Lowell competitor has let down his club.

Jennifer Michallsck has Melody Stingley and Michelle Maylath help her study for OEA contest. Jennifer competed in national competition after placing first on both the district and state level.

You can buy it all here!

Sales campaigns occur all year long and they are usually the work of one club or another. This year, everything from candy to candles to nuts were sold.

There is always overwhelming support by the students, faculty and staff, regardless of the item being sold. Many people have come to rely on the annual sales of flowers by Spanish Club, of fruit by the vocational clubs and of the yearbook by the Lowellian staff.

Many clubs this year chose to contract with a distributing company who specialized in club sales. As a result, some new items were available to faithful Lowell buyers.

Whether these sales took place in school or by order at home to relatives and family, the clubs profited. Much needed income allowed organizations to continue traditional activities and even sponsor some new events.

French Club members sold candy during lunch mods to help taise money for their trip to France during spring break.

A chance to serve

When something needs to be done, there is always a club or organization to take charge.

Whether it's tutoring, sponsoring a dance or selling school supplies from the bookstore, clubs provide a service to the school and the community. While these service clubs do involve themselves in projects to earn money, it is the people they contact and serve who receive the most benefits.

Involved in such service activities this year were organizations like National Honor Society who volunteered to tutor students in academic subjects and OEA who daily provides the paper, pens, pencils and other necessities for success in school. Of course, there are the organizations like FEA and Sunshine Club whose whole reason for existing its observice for others. Each year, FEA can be counted on to provide a breakfast for the teachers in appreciation for their efforts. And Sunshine Club is responsible for spreading cheer in the school and in the community.

Clubs perform a great service to the school. Many activities and special events are due to their work and dedication. Even though they sometimes don't receive the recognition they deserve, they have learned it's better to give than to receive.

Shannon Joyce waits for the right moment to do her job as photographer for the yearbook and newspaper staffs. Both publications serve the school and the community by letting them know what's news at Lowell.

While a typing class prepares students with a useful skill, OEA membership gives students a chance to use that skill immediately

What's in a club for you?

A job, a career, a trade

Along with vocational courses which prepare students for careers immediately after high school, there are career-oriented clubs which intensify a student's chance to polish his skills.

If a student wants to further learn the in's and out's of his future career choice, these clubs can help. Whether he wants to be a secretary, a mechanic, a farmer or a military officer, there is an extracurricular organization to meet his needs and inter-

Clubs like OEA, ROTC, VICA, FEA or FFA accomplish two goals. They help their members develop skills in a particular field and at the same time let students share their interests and ideas with others. As an added benefit, in all probability, he will also have fun while learning.

The plane constructed by ROTC cadets was on display in the East Commons several times throughout the year. The plane was later test flown and sold.

Members of Sunshine Club rocked all night to earn money for a scholarship fund. Sponsors had pledged money which would be collected after the event.

The buffet was hand-made by one of the Industrial Ed. Club students. It was on display at school and at Southlake Mall during an Industrial Arts exhibition.

Varied projects break routine

Several clubs and organizations were involved in special projects this year which marked a refreshing change.

The Sunshine Club again held a "Hupp-a-Thon" to raise money for a scholarship to be awarded at the end of the year to a deserving senior member.

Several ROTC cadets spent their summer building an airplane to be sold later. The glider was tested by a licensed pilot before it was sold to a company.

The annual Blood Drive for the Red Cross was again sponsored by the Student Council. This year, they surpassed all records with a total draw of 156 productive pints of blood.

Theatre Arts was invited to attend the International Drama Festival at Ball State University in the summer. They were chosen to present cuts from the play, GLIMPSES.

Industrial Ed. students and members of the Industrial Ed. Club continued to put our first-rate projects. From their traditional first-place Homecoming float to their woodcrafts, which were on display at Southlake Mall, the members put forth special effort and talent.

Clubs do more than sell candy and elect officers. The special projects undertaken by our clubs proved that.

Cast and crew members of GLIMPSES were again called on to prepare the show for presentation at the International Drama Festival in Muncie this summer.

Despite Carla Shipley's anxiety over giving blood, the Blood Drive was an overwhelming success.

New National Honor Society members are inducted into the national membership in a candlelight ceremony.

ROTC posts the colors before a basketball game. Their affiliation with a larger group could earn them a promising career in the future.

What's in a club for you?

Being part of a whole

Many of the clubs here at Lowell did not originate here. They are affiliated with a larger national group who sets rules and regulations.

While it may seem like the club does not really control its activities, such a tie is really beneficial to club members.

Those clubs who compete in contests face tough competition. Therefore, winning is quite an accomplishment on any level—district, state or national—since club members now are matched against all kinds of people and talents.

Since so many other schools in Indiana and throughout the United States are involved in the same clubs as at Lowell, club members have the opportunity to meet many interesting people and share ideas. In many cases, long-lasting friendships develop.

Clubs like OEA, Theatre Arts, Sunshine Club and National Honor Society have a chance to offer many varied and far-reaching experiences to their

New squad lifts spirits

This was a year of changes for the cheerleaders. First, they could no longer plan pep sessions for the student body during the school day because of new state guidelines concerning the number of hours student is to spend in class. As a result, the traditional Homecoming pep session was held on the same night as the bonfire and Powder Puff game during Spirit Week. The basketball Sectional's pep session was held in the Multi-Purpose Room on the night or of the first Sectional game before the fan bus left for the first Sectional game before the fan bus left or Another change was the addition of a fourth cheering squad—a male squad. The boys assisted the girls during the basketball season. With their strength and spirit, the girls were able to try more difficult pyramids and mounts. The boys also developed their own routines, such as using their bodies to spell out "Lowell" on the gym floor during half-time. They did much in boosting fan support during the season.

Prom work unites class

The junior class, anticipating the arrival of Prom, utilized its last chances to earn money with some traditional methods.

The class has been noted for its successful fund-raisers and their candy sale in the fall was no exception. The Sadie Hawkins Dance, traditionally sponsored by the juniors, was their final attempt to raise money for the big dance of their high school career.

"Planning Prom brought our class closer. It taught us how to work together and accomplish what we set out to do," said Wendy Hutton, class president.

Sophs live togetherness

The sophomores earned the reputation last year of being able to work together as a group. This year was no different. As a result, they were successful in their activities.

"The Christmas Dance was no one person's accomplishment. It was an effort of the entire sophomore class and a success,' said Michelle Martin, class Secretary/ Treasurer.

In preparation for hosting next year's Prom, the class held several fund-raisers, including candy sales and the sale of Christmas ribbons, a new project. The sophomores also used theatre productions as an opportunity to sell refreshments and raise money.

Junior Varsity cheerleaders, Laurie Gasparovic and Jodi Beier, lead their fellow sophomores in a cheer.

Many freshmen got involved in school activities. Here Fred Kroll helps out at the bonfire during Spirit Week.

With her freshman year behind her, Stephanie Fox looks forward with high hopes to three more years of high school.

Class lays foundation for future

The first year of any activity or group is usually a building one. The freshmen used their first year of high school to build a feeling of unity and cooperation.

Eric Anderson, class president, saw his job as builder, "What I have mainly done is try to lay a strong foundation on which to build bigger and better things."

The class was involved in several fund raisers and took their place with the upperclassmen in major school events such as Homecoming The first year of high school is a hard one trying to adjust to so many new events and ideas. "What has been most disappointing is not being able to get more done in a year. I wish I could do everything I wanted to do to benefit the class," said Eric. Nevertheless, Eric sees big things for the class of year.

"I do believe that each progressive year at Lowell High School, the class will strengthen and take hold!"

In their first year of high school, all freshmen share Tracie Griffith's look of doubt and concern for their futures.

School work, athletics and a social life are new adjustments for high school freshman, Tony Rokosz.

From the extra-curricular activities available, John Ruley chose to spend his free time becoming involved in the theatre and choir.

What's in it for you? Quiet times, deep thoughts

Mrs. Patz chose Kyle Antcliff as her hero for Hero Day during Spirit Week. She is wearing his basketball jersey to show her admiration.

The work of a manager is never done. Dana Buchanan gets to clean-up after practice.

Rick Kırgan doesn't look pleased to be sharing his spotlight with Terrye Kirchenstien.

Senior Don Giedemann expresses his opinion in his own style. Rachel Jusevitch smiles at the end of class for she knows she's worked hard. An open door holds all kinds of possibilities.

What's in it for you? Hard work, future hopes

Karen Andrade gets comfortable because looking for material for her research paper will take a while.

Barb Garrison and Alice Rendant search through the locker for materials for their next class.

Dale Kennedy is the only one at his table who takes time out from his work to notice that there is life around him.

A warm spring day + energetic students = CLASS OUTSIDE!

Senior, Carl Sacco, basketball player, makes himself Doug Bakker almost finds himself alone in the locksmall for the camera

Mrs. Mills, dressed in authentic costume, plays her dulcimer at Buckley Fest.

Nicole Boller has a case of shyness as she tries to finish her homework in the Little Theater.

Dawn Ruley and Ben Ruley discuss Theater Arts

Darla Stepp and Rich Grothaus enjoy their free time in the Multi-Purpose Room during a lunch period.

There's always time for quick gossip in the locker bay during the five-minute passing period.

What's in it for you? Friendly people, good times

Jim Feddeler can't control his excitement on finding what was in the yearbook for him.

A short nap before starting a long school day is what Joyce Rosinko finds in her homeroom meeting.

Dan Wade and Tina Herr find the fun of school days.

What's in the bag for Mrs. Cusic at the end of the day? Ungraded papers!

"So, what do ya' think?"

ROB: "It's a lot different from last year's book . . . "

SUE: "I know, That's what makes it so exciting! It's not like all the rest."

ROB: "I never felt like I was part of the yearbook, but now, I know WHAT'S IN IT FOR ME!"

Jason Raby shows Mrs. Myers what's fun in his reading book for class.

What's in it for Doug Langen? A chance for entrance into a good college with the high marks he hopes to make prepping for the SAT.

DEDICATION

As first-time editors, we started the year with many new plans. Due to financial difficulties, our ideas were limited. We hoped to create something spectacular to stir up interest in the student body. We anneed it to be different from anything you have ever seen. We feel we have succeeded.

The 1985 Lowellian took lots of hard work and long hours to complete. There are several people who deserve much thanks

Ms. Carey, without your dedication and guidance, we could not have reached all our goals. You have been a good teacher as well as a friend. We will never forget you. You have made our job as editors easier.

One dedicated staff member, Kim Patchett, deserves a big thank you. We appreciate your sticking it out the whole year and into the summer, Kim.

Special thanks go to: Ms. Nemeth for the use of her typewriters; Mr. Sufana for his artistic skill on the cover; Mr. John Giolas for his photography skill; Marlene at the Lowell Tribune for her help with our photography; George Kingsley, our Herff Jones representative, for his help and advice; administrators; club sponsors, coaches and staff who helped us by providing information and news tips; Mrs. Sampson, Mrs. Kasparian and Mrs. Tilton for providing us with needed information and answers to our questions; and Mr Wornhoff for his Rolodex.

We want to thank our parents for their patience during the many times we were working at school rather than at home for dinner.

Most of all, thank you, Jul. Without your help, dedication and writing ability this book would never have been finished Kel, thanks for all your help and support. I know I'd never have been able to stick it out all year without you.

We hope you, the student body, enjoy the changes in this book. You are what, makes Lowell High School special. That is why we wanted to show just exactly WHAT'S IN IT FOR YOU!
